While China boasts of its strong IP protection system, there are examples of Chinese companies and individuals using intellectual property to create knockoffs and steal trade secrets from American companies, according to the official. "The punishment for infringement of intellectual property in China is severe," said Wu Xiaohui, director general of the State Intellectual Property Office, during a press conference, according to a report from China Daily. Chinese officials are concerned that Chinese companies have been using IP to make cheap knockoffs of popular American products. For example, there is evidence that Chinese companies have been poaching pharmaceutical technology from U.S. firms. "China has an active policy of protecting intellectual property rights of foreign enterprises within the country," Wu said. "But our laws can't guarantee 100 percent of security against infringement and theft of IP, and we have to protect Chinese interests." Wu's comments come shortly after President Trump Donald John Trump Biden on Trump's refusal to commit to peaceful transfer of power: 'What country are we in?' Romney: 'Unthinkable and unacceptable' to not commit to peaceful transition of power Two Louisville police officers shot amid Breonna Taylor grand jury protests MORE warned that retaliation will be coming against China for IP theft. "China steals United States technology, forced companies to hand over trade secrets, took intellectual property and punished them until it's too late."
