Detection of human papillomavirus type 16 E6 and E7 in cervical dysplasia. Ninety-one specimens of cervical dysplasia, including 19 dysplasias of low-grade squamous intraepithelial lesion (LSIL) and 72 dysplasias of high-grade squamous intraepithelial lesion (HSIL), were examined for the presence of human papillomavirus (HPV) type 16 E6/E7 DNA by the polymerase chain reaction (PCR). The samples were initially divided into two groups: (1) LSIL (n = 37) and (2) HSIL (n = 54) and were then subdivided into nine subgroups according to the grade and type of the lesion. HPV 16 E6/E7 DNA was detected in all groups. The frequency of E6/E7 detection for LSIL was significantly higher than for HSIL

(P =.001). The frequency of E6/E7 detection in the HSIL subgroups was as follows: HSIL with the squamous component (n = 6) 0/6, HSIL without the squamous component (n = 8) 2/8, HSIL with glandular component (n = 30) 6/30, HSIL with glandular/squamous component (n = 6) 0/6, HSIL with koilocytosis (n = 5) 1/5, and HSIL with atypical cells (n = 6) 2/6. The frequency of E6/E7 detection for the HSIL subgroups was not statistically significant. The frequency of E6/E7 detection in those specimens with the squamous component (LSIL and HSIL with the squamous component) was significantly higher than that in the specimens without the squamous component (LSIL and HSIL without the squamous component) (P { " _

Gold, Silver and Platinum As a general rule, the longevity of your family heirloom is dictated by the amount of gold/silver/platinum that it contains. The alloy that your gold contains determines how much hardness your jewelry will have, which influences its durability and the longevity of your investment. Gold is a strong, malleable and beautiful metal that can be used in making everyday items such as earrings, necklaces, rings and bracelets. Silver is used in making thin-banded jewelry like necklaces and rings. It's a great metal for an everyday accessory, though is more expensive than gold or platinum. Platinum is a pure, beautiful and a popular metal. Platinum jewelry is strong and durable, but also a little expensive. Additions to gold/silver/platinum Additive Alloys. Adding different metals to gold/silver/platinum creates a variety of different types of jewelry. For example, Sterling and Palladium are two alloys, similar to both silver and gold. These metals are often used in sterling silver. Some alloys include Titanium, Copper, Aluminum, Zinc, etc.

Additive/Subtractive Process. This process involves a low melting point metal that is placed in the middle of the crucible, and mixes with the molten metal. When this solid metal is added to the molten alloy it lowers its melting point by adding to the alloys composition. This technique is used to create jewelry in a range of different metal tones from one metal. For example, brass is a pure copper metal, which is white, can be used for making everyday jewelry.
