I'd like to know why Java's Java IO InputStream.read() method never returns -1. I see lots of examples around web that returns -1 to indicate EOF. But I never get such an indication (I always get the value 0), even when I try to read beyond the end of the stream. I know that instead, one can use Java IO FileInputStream.read() that returns -1 to indicate EOF. Why the difference? And what would happen if I read too much beyond the end of the stream? A: Java IOInputStream.read() may return -1 if the underlying InputStream is closed or a connection error occurred. You can read more about it in the source code. In the case of the simple FileInputStream, the read may also return -1 if the file is opened for reading and the given offset is beyond the end of the file. A: It never returns -1, it can return any value, including 0 to indicate EOF. To see it you need to use FileInputStream which closes the file if you are past the end. It might also return -1 for various I/O errors as you mentioned, or just return 0 if EOF was reached.
