app, you'll be prepared to transform your workspace and do your best work every day! This app is ad-supported; we hope you can see it as an attempt to help make the App Store more engaging, interesting, and enjoyable.

Screenshots Reviews Very nice 5 By Zococo Really nice app, but I recommend using a magnetic strip on your desktop, like we had on our magnetic desktop, so that you can swipe your style to another desktop and it opens on the correct desktop. It's a little bit annoying to swipe to the desktop every time, but it can be useful when you want to go from work to home, for example. Good application for staying organized 4 By Djones1991 For me at least, an app like this is great for not only allowing you to stay organized but to enjoy simple pleasures as well. A really fun, easy to navigate interface. The official response was quick and easy, I'm a very satisfied customer! Amazing 5 By caconda I cannot express

deskSpace is a neat application that brings a fresh meaning to the idea of organizing your time and work harmoniously. It manages to balance both serious matter and interesting, funny ideas. These are the true elements that turn one's day from bad to better or from good to great. It's simply a great experience to play with this app and definitely a good choice if looking to download an app that will allow you to increase productivity. What makes deskSpace stand out from the crowd: Do you ever feel like your time is being wasted? Well, not necessarily, but if you answered yes, I think you might want to try out deskSpace. As already mentioned, this app is a combination of an organizer, a time-management, and an app for Feng shui. It seems like the idea behind it is to bring together various aspects of your life into one place so that you can make your life more fun, happy, and even more in control of yourself. After installing it, you need to create an account. The free version will allow you to set up four different reminders, create a list of daily tasks, and assign personalized color to each of them. You can also choose between 32 color themes and also add an alarm to each one. The app can be used to download tasks directly from your to-do list, but you also have an option to export its information as a text file. A document can then be opened to add it to your notes. Every time you create a task, you can give it a name and select the color. You can sync the task list to your desktop app for further editing. You can also turn on/off each task manually. The desktop app has a broad range of features that allow you to modify things such as dates, times, and settings. You can also set the new task as private. It also has a large range of compatible file types, and you can customize the order in which they appear when adding or editing tasks. The program also comes with a huge number of search capabilities. You can use the built-in search functionality to find files, keep track of tasks, and even a stock market. You can use the built-in database, import a database, or use a file folder. Everything seems to be very intuitive, and the app gives you the freedom of using your own vocabulary as well as its own domain-based language. What we think: Overall, this application is highly customizable, and you can use your own words to desktopspace is an app that offers so much information about personal life and the tasks you do. What would be a feature in a calendar or agenda app? Who can afford to have one of those, right? Not in this case. deskpace offers a refreshing and interesting way to help you organize your time and keep track of your duties. Most apps seem to focus on work, leaving personal life a mystery. Some have a stand-alone application for personal life (e.g. ToDoList, Agenda), but deskpace takes the opposite approach. It brings a humorous character to help you focus on the time you spend at home. No matter how hard you try, you will often find yourself reading a book, making dinner, or just relaxing in front of the TV while someone is bumping into you in the kitchen. You might not even notice, but you're not getting a single moment to do anything for yourself. This is a place where you can't be interrupted, no phone can reach, and all your work is in front of you on your PC. What this means is you can be productive and nothing can disturb your progress, even if you happen to be having fun. You can add reminders and reminders to do lists and you can modify a couple of settings, but the purpose of the app is to help you organize your tasks (and a few personal items) and keep track of your time. You have the choice between using a traditional time scheduler, a todo list, or a music player. Fortunately, desk space has all three. While these basics work fine, the application has plenty of great features that make for an elegant and fun to use application. The program's interface is easy to understand and well thought out. When opening it, you'll have some preliminary options, like helping it to remember your last profile, setting it as your default start-up, and using it in a full screen mode. So much is achieved through the arrows, buttons, and tabs. They help you access the time scheduler (by default, you have 8 hours/8 minutes), the todo list, and the music player. The latter offers a lot of options. You can import your own music or search the web to find the best songs. The preferences are neatly placed in a box that shows each of its features. Sadly, you can't adjust the volume. An option to use themes would have been nice, but you can always have a look at the graphics and choose one that would add character to

What's New In?
