When he recovers, he goes to his fiancée and finds that she is now engaged to the same man who helped him. And she, according to his explanations, also damaged her mind. Well, then everything is clear: you can't argue with your parents, and before the wedding they take her home. I think that the scenario is the same, but how it reflects our life in the vast majority of cases, I do not know. Deception, lies and falsehood have become so firmly established in our lives that we no longer notice how this is happening. And we don't have time to come to our senses, sometimes never. good day, Elena!

And thank you for your kind advice on how to improve relations with your daughter. But this question did not happen to me, because there was no need to "bring" the daughter to the enemies. For two years of study, my daughter has already realized that I am responsible for her and protect her with all my might, and I donâ€™t really need any of her actions (except for the one that hurts her). And although she was not always obedient, I donâ€™t see malicious intent in hurting me: she protects me from her offenders, and I indulge her. She, too, is uncomfortable when she is called that, especially when she believes that "this topic" is not worth mentioning in a conversation. But the whole point is that, to my daughterâ€™s insult, I am also terribly jealous of her surroundings (no matter how difficult it was for me to admit this even to myself). It follows from this that most of the insults were inflicted, rather, not on me, but on strangers who did not even have a reason to be offended by us. And finally, I apologize to all those who once voluntarily or involuntarily harmed me. I sincerely believe that everyone is "clean and bright", and I am a sinner. I am very glad that God helped you find mutual understanding with your daughter, but I am very afraid that her emotionality makes her a target for everyone who wants to upset her. Learn not to take to heart what can be the cause of trouble for you. If something does not work out for your daughter in educational activities - do not rush to shout "guard" and "tell everyone", try to calmly deal with the reasons. And if it turns out that this is not from poor academic performance, then pray that the Lord will help your daughter get rid of this weakness
