Experts believe that the country will be facing the collapse of public transport within the next five years. Experts believe that the country will be facing the collapse of public transport within the next five years, as citizens do not have the means to purchase the latest gadgets. Media reports suggest that China's "one-child policy", which forced all Chinese couples to have a single child, and the implementation of the State Capital Construction Law in 2013, have had an adverse impact on the public transport system. In 2012, the People's Daily reported that passenger turnover decreased by as much as 50 percent. According to the Beijing Times, 1,000 miles of subway tracks have been damaged or destroyed. In particular, China's public transport system is suffering from the transition from the old prefecture-level public transport system to the new nation-level public transport system. Officials will announce by the end of this year that the nation-level public transport system will be implemented by 2020. Public transport systems such as the Beijing subway and the Beijing city bus will be most affected. The State-owned business conglomerate, China Railway Construction Corporation (CRCC), have been suffering heavy losses in recent years. The Dongfeng, CITIC and Capital International are the three main CRCC enterprises. This year, the three enterprises have reported losses of $64 billion yuan. The key factors include a lack of capital and a number of cost issues. CRCC was founded in 1946 during the early days of Chinese socialism. Since the late 1970s, CRCC has been concentrating on the construction of high-speed railways. Today, CRCC has become the leading organisation in high-speed rail. The company's annual revenue is $28 billion yuan. In 2014, CRCC reported a loss of $13.5 billion yuan. At the beginning of this year, CRCC demanded $9 billion of capital to continue operation. However, the State Assets Supervision and Administration Commission refused to issue any financial support. Official sources have claimed that the problem has occurred because CRCC is the only organisation in the public transport sector that does not have a proven track record and has not been accepted by China's central government. Beijing Subway Line 9 Operator Beijing Subway Line 9 took its first passengers on Thursday. In recent years, subway line 9 was the

What's New in the Photoshop CC 2019?

1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for forming a semiconductor device, and more particularly, to a method for forming a semiconductor device capable of preventing generation of a void when forming a semiconductor device including both a shallow trench isolation (STI) structure and a process of a semiconductor device including a via. 2. Description of the Related Art During the manufacturing process of a semiconductor device, a plurality of shallow trench isolation structures (STIs) are formed in a silicon substrate in order to isolate semiconductor devices. More particularly, the STIs are formed by filling an isolation layer with a trench and etching the silicon substrate. However, if a void is generated in the isolation layer, a phenomenon called "seepage" may occur. Seepage refers to a phenomenon in which the adjacent isolation layer is swollen by filling the void created in the isolation layer. Seepage is a serious problem since it adversely affects the isolation property of an isolation layer. FIG. 1 is a cross sectional view showing a conventional method of forming a shallow trench isolation structure. Referring to FIG. 1, a silicon substrate 10 is provided, and an isolation layer 12 is formed of a silicon oxide layer for isolating active regions. More particularly, an isolation layer 12 for isolating an active region of a semiconductor device is formed by filling a void V generated in the isolation layer 12 with a silicon oxide layer, and then etching the silicon substrate 10 using the isolation layer 12 as a mask. However, if the void V is filled with a high density isolation layer 12 for a shallow trench isolation (STI) structure, the isolation layer 12 may be deformed as shown in FIG. 1. This phenomenon, i.e., deformation of the isolation layer 12 occurs when the void V is filled with an isolation layer 12 of a high density. Further, the deformation of the isolation layer 12 may occur due to the surface tension effect caused by a void V generated during an etching process of the isolation layer 12. As a result, a process of filling a void with an isolation layer may not be performed sufficiently and, thus, defects occur due to the formation of voids V after the formation of the isolation layer 12. FIG. 2A to FIG. 2F are cross sectional views showing a conventional process of forming a shallow trench isolation structure. Referring to FIG. 2A, a photo resist layer is deposited on a silicon
