Dana White is facing a major backlash from fans over his lack of interest in signing Georges St. Pierre, while GSP's camp has raised concerns over how much money the UFC has to offer in a potential deal. But according to former UFC interim welterweight champion Carlos Condit, White is also missing the point on St. Pierre's next fight. "I think he doesn't understand the business and that he will never sign Georges St. Pierre," Condit said on Thursday's edition of The MMA Hour. "And it's not like Georges St. Pierre will sign with the UFC. Georges St. Pierre is a guy that is committed. He's going to fight." Over the weekend, St. Pierre confirmed that he would be vacating his UFC welterweight title to coach season 13 of "The Ultimate Fighter," which is set to premiere Tuesday on FOX Sports 1. The manner in which GSP's name has been dropped over the past week has created buzz around the promotion, as well as some criticism of how much money the company is willing to offer in a new deal. Condit says he has no idea what White is on about, but insists that White should let the UFC figure that part out for itself. "Georges St. Pierre isn't going to sign with the UFC because he has that commitment," Condit said. "People should really look at it from a business perspective. Business deals are about money." The former interim welterweight champion says White is in it for himself. "Let's face it, Dana White is Dana White," he said. "He's just in it for himself. And I think you should look into it as a business. I think the easiest way to make it in this business is to sign guys to multi-year deals. It's called, 'Make the most money.'" "If the two sides get to the point where it's a lot of money, then there's going to be a lot of money involved," Condit continued. "And from what I've heard, it's a seven-figure deal." Condit was also critical of the UFC

Current understanding of the pathogenesis of scleritis. Scleritis is a painful, sight-threatening, ocular inflammation of the sclera and the subconjunctival tissue, and predominantly affects women of childbearing age. The best-known clinical feature of scleritis is scleral inflammation with a scleral thickening known as ancillary signs of scleritis. Although the precise pathogenesis of scleritis is still unknown, recent studies have provided some insights into the pathogenesis of this condition. The present review focuses on recent literature pertaining to the pathogenesis of scleritis. In addition, recent findings on aqueous humor and serum cytokines and the role of various innate and adaptive immune cells are briefly summarized. Scleritis is a common inflammatory disease of unknown origin, and its precise pathogenesis is still uncertain. Recent studies have provided some insights into the pathogenesis of scleritis. In addition, most studies reported that there is little relationship between serum cytokines and the disease activity of scleritis. Further studies on the precise pathogenesis of scleritis are essential for the diagnosis and treatment of this disease.

Q: How to make a webserver showing a file (if possible) I'm looking for a solution to be able to easily make a webserver that shows a specified file. I'm thinking of something like the file/ in the browser.

A: You can use `gci` for this. `gc *.txt` Will create a text file that contains the full path and filename of all the files in the current directory and sub-directories that end in the specified extension (e.g. .txt). `gc -Fil Directory` will just loop through the files in a directory. `gc -Fil: Regular Expression:*`, which will match any files with the path beginning with `Fil:`. To have it constantly showing the file you need to have it run as a scheduled task. An efficient experimental procedure for fabrication of single- and double-sided functional polymer/ceramic bilayers using a selective functionalization method. Polymer-ceramic bilayers are one of the most important and interesting functional materials that demonstrate both interesting electrical and mechanical properties. The synthesis of these bilayers has been mainly directed towards single-sided and polymer-ceramic bilayers. However, there is still a lack of well-known and inexpensive methods to prepare polymer/ceramic bilayers with multiple
