PlanPoint is an excellent PowerPoint add-in that allows users to add time constraints to their presentations. This time-based solution allows users to add and remove time constraints with just a single click. PlanPoint can be installed directly into PowerPoint and can be used with most versions of Microsoft PowerPoint from PowerPoint 2007 onwards. It integrates extremely easily with PowerPoint and is likely to be very well integrated into the user interface. Why you need it: This add-in gives user the ability to hide their PowerPoint slides during presentations. These slides can be hidden for a specified period of time, a different length of time for each slide or even for a different period of time for each slide. The reason for this is simple. Sometimes users in presentations can't keep focus on a slide and they would like to tell their audience to pay attention because something important is going to happen on the next slide. It's a common problem for any number of reasons. This is a really great tool to solve this problem. Another reason for a time constraint add-in is that you can hide all the slides for a certain period of time. For example, the slides could be hidden all for the time the speaker is speaking, or for the entire presentation for a specific reason. In addition, by hiding slides during presentations, the time can be saved when the slides are resized. PowerPoint provides an image that shows how large the slides are. Typically, the larger the image, the longer the presentation is going to take. Therefore, if a user hides the slides, this will obviously increase the presentation time. With that said, you should note that the addon offers a zoom control for photos that you can use to make slides smaller to save time. You should also note that it doesn't give the user the opportunity to delete the slides. Settings: There are several settings available in the addon, including the option to hide the slides for a specific period of time. This can be set to any number of seconds, or even minutes in some cases. The only option that requires some preliminary work is to choose which slides to hide during the time period. This works in a similar way to an ActiveX dropdown list that the user can choose from. Furthermore, users will be able to choose the time to hide the slides. All that you have to do to add timer effects is to click on the Settings tab and then choose either one of the settings listed under “Start Slide Duration”. The addon includes 09e8f5149f

PlanPoint is one such plugin that allows users to customize their slideshows by adding timer effects, which can hide slides during user-defined intervals. The add-on integrates seamlessly with Microsoft PowerPoint 2010 or later and new users will find its dedicated ribbon highly intuitive and easy to grasp. The add-on can be employed both with old presentations or new projects and putting it to work requires only a simple tick on the “PlanPoint enabled” checkbox. There are multiple scheduling choices for users, including options to display slides only during selected days and even during certain hours. What's more, adding time constraints can be performed by picking dates from a built-in calendar. Two auxiliary options control the slideshow's behavior when time constraints are eliminated. For example, one can adjust the show to jump immediately to a scheduled slide, once the time limits are eliminated. Another option is to show the slide at an exact hour or skip it altogether. One of the great features of this add-in is that it allows one to schedule individual slides from within the same show. This is a great method of creating highly customized presentations, which are tailor-made for the specific tastes and needs of users. The plugin allows users to select when slides are displayed and when they remain hidden from view. To sum up, PlanPoint is a simple, but effective PowerPoint add-in that can be useful to anyone interested in inserting time constraints to their presentations.
