See also Autodesk Autodesk: Inventor Category:Autodesk Category:Discontinued productsQ: Core Data relationship in multiple levels I have a Core Data model with a Parent entity that has multiple children. Say, for example, I have a parent entity with attributes "name" and "children". I have another entity (let's call it Theorem) that can be "attached" to this parent entity. I want a Theorem object to have a property referencing the current parent entity's children. Is it possible to set up the relationship for this to work? If so, where does one place the code to retrieve the parent's children? If not, is there some other solution to represent this? A: Yes. You can setup a one-to-many relationship between Theorem and Parent. If you specify that Parent.children are to 570a42141b
