An example of an electrically programmable non-volatile memory device of this type is described in U.S. Pat. No. 4,139,998, Levy, "Memory Device Using Floating-Gate Memory Cells", assigned to the assignee of the present invention. In the U.S. Pat. No. 4,139,998 patent, the floating gate of each cell is programmed by injecting, through the oxide, hot electrons produced by a current flow through a heavily doped impurity region to the channel-accelerating junction between the source and drain regions of the cell. A major problem in achieving a high yield with the EEPROM device as described in the U.S. Pat. No. 4,139,998 patent is the problem of over-erasure of the memory cells. For example, if the EEPROM device includes 64,000 memory cells, each cell having a programming window of only
