rogue's gallery of the heroic cosmonaut. Neil Armstrong was born in Ohio, but he went to high school in Florida. The oldest of eight children, he was not much of a student and was best when, rather than studying, he was climbing trees or camping in the woods. He was not athletic but learned an incredible amount of physics from his high school science teacher, John Sternlicht. There was a teacher in his hometown who encouraged him to join an amateur theatrical group. At the urging of his mother, he went to college at Purdue, then transferred to the University of Cincinnati, where he graduated with a degree in mathematics and physics in 1948. After graduating, he joined the Navy and served on a submarine, but soon he left the service to attend graduate school. By this time he had decided that he would be a professional mathematician, so he entered graduate school at Columbia and got his Ph.D. in mathematics in 1953. His doctoral advisor was Kurt Friedrich Koepf. In his thesis he proved an interesting theorem in graph theory, now called the Koepf-Larson theorem. His teacher and thesis advisor, however, wanted him to go to the University of Notre Dame and teach mathematics, so Armstrong went back to Cincinnati in 1955. Shortly after he started teaching at Notre Dame, he decided that he did not want to be a professor, and when the opportunity arose to go to the University of California at Los Angeles, he took it. He did not like the Los Angeles climate and was no longer teaching a significant number of graduate students, so he took a job at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, California. He did a number of things there, but he is best known for being the man who flew the first United States manned lunar mission (Apollo 11) in 1969. On the second day of the mission, when the astronauts were making their first LM landing, Armstrong was in the cockpit of the LM when he realized that a bolt had loosened. Fortunately, they were able to fix the problem and made the landing. When Neil Armstrong returned to Earth, no one knew how to crack the code of the new lunar lander, so he went back to the NASA office and created a name for himself: "Buzz." Armstrong married the geophysicist
