Wellington Cricket Club Wellington Cricket Club was an English cricket club in Wellington, Somerset. The club was founded in 1880 by Capt F. W. Clark, R.E. It was originally based at the Devonshire Ground. Clark took a keen interest in developing Wellington Cricket Club and was instrumental in establishing the club as a semi-professional one. Clark would live in Wellington until his death in 1919, four years before the club disbanded. Wellington often shared some fixtures with the other north Somerset side Clifton but primarily focused on its own matches. Its home venue was the Devonshire Ground, which it shared with the local football club Wellington Town AFC (who also played rugby union at the same ground). Two cricket fixtures against the Somerset County Cricket Club in 1881 and 1886 are reported in the Clifton Courier and Standard. Cricket players The 1880s saw a number of notable players emerge from Wellington Cricket Club. England all-rounder Frank Mitchell and all-rounders Henry Wright and Harry King were first-class cricketers for Wellington. Another notable Wellington player was Wilfrid Nash. He played for Somerset CCC from 1899 to 1911, captaining the county in 1906. In 1908 he made 244 and 177 for Somerset against the Australians, taking a hat-trick and contributing to Somerset's innings total of 595. Wellington finished 10th in the 1903 County Championship. Former England Test cricketer Jim Orridge started playing for Wellington in 1882 and went on to represent Somerset CCC in the first two seasons of the Minor Counties Championship in 1890 and 1891. His county career was then cut short by a leg injury. He continued to play for Wellington and also played for Staffordshire from 1894 to 1907. Q: Record list of objects in SQL Server I am storing Application-type configuration data in a SQL Server database. The configuration data looks like this: Id Type Name But if I want to store multiple configuration records, I would like to have a List of these configuration records, which I can then perform queries on. Example: If I have 5 configuration records stored in the database, then I would like to store them as a List so that I can then create some kind of a Map. I was thinking to store a complete list of objects in a table like this: Table ConfigurationTable Id List But I really don't know how to access the list of ConfigurationRecords and if its even a good idea to store them as a list. A: Check this solution from experts at stackoverflow.com and they created a generic table using the structure you described.
