Apr 1, 2020 chunk!9/11/01 Q: Confusion with expression-list construct I'm writing a grammar to determine whether a string is a validly-formatted list of numbers. I've got a handful of expression-list constructs that help to do this, including: `expression-list ::= expression (expression-list)*` ; This works fine if I have something like (2,3,4), it understands it to mean ((2,3,4)). But I also have some constructs that look like: `expression-list ::= (expression (expression-list))` And in these cases, it doesn't seem to see ((2,3,4)) as valid. What I want is that expression-list to only match a list of expressions, and not an expression of a list of expressions. But I'm not sure what to do, and looking at the LL(1) algorithm, I can't find anything that will help. A: The grammar you posted isn't ambiguous. "Expression-list" is not a Grammar Rule. It is a terminal production. To make your rule unambiguous, put parentheses around the sub-expression. `expression-list ::= expression (expression-list)*` ; The language can tell the difference between `expression (expression-list)` and `(expression (expression-list))` if expression-list is non-terminal; otherwise, it couldn't tell the difference between `2+2` and `2 + (2+2)`, so in your case it wouldn't be able to tell the difference between `expression ((expression (expression-list)))` and `expression (((expression (expression-list))))` because both are unambiguous. Kolkata: Bihar's newest Congress MP from Begusarai district on Sunday on Friday said there were no forces within the country to ensure India-China border was an obstacle. "There are no forces in the country to ensure India-China border is an obstacle. Nobody is thinking to keep it as an obstacle. We should think about India's prosperity," he told reporters. "There are some problems on India-Pakistan border but there are no problems on India-China border," he added. Asked whether he got any support from BJP and Trinamool Congress for his joining of Congress, he told reporters that nobody should link him with parties.
