Add the driver download feature to the equation, and you've got yourself an NVIDIA GFX optimization one-stop-shop. What's new Version 1.0.3: -- Added User Guide -- Minor bug fixes -- Added driver-type-specific 'Drivers' button in Home tab -- Added/renamed settings option in Home tab -- Added shortcut to post-processing effects -- Added 'Make Game Wider' feature -- Added 'Focus on FOV' feature -- Added 'Capture Screen' feature -- Added support for 21:9 ratio displays Andrew Gaither: Lobo! Hey, I do like the eye candy, but this app is pretty useless. It should be focused on one thing and one thing only - optimize games. Instead of hiding the monitor controls so it takes up way too much space in the monitor and requires you to move your mouse all the way down to the bottom left of the screen to use them. Why remove in-game features that can potentially be used while playing a game? Who knows if there's a sound effect being recorded during gameplay? I highly doubt that you'd want to stop that, but there's a recording button, but it won't work if the microphone is inactive. Now, this wouldn't be too bad, but it also doesn't tell you when the microphone is recording, or what it's recording, so it's useless unless you know what you're doing. I would really like to see it go back to being a tweak. It's already proved itself time and time again, but hey, it's the Blizzard Store, so it can do what it wants. Version 1.0.2 -- Minor bug fixes and stability improvements -- Removed user guide -- Added 'Streaming Service' option t0r52010 This app is pretty weak compared to its competitor, MSI Afterburner and it is heavily based on it. I can't even use it effectively. First I couldn't change my monitor settings. Then I discovered a not so helpful slider that changes the FPS of your game by 1. Then I went to Settings, and this is where I found a bunch of abbreviations and numbers,
