noticeable thing about this one is her "talking" lips. They just speak the lyrics of her song, "Empty Space". Her music video also contains a few other possible hints at the title of her upcoming album. There's a little wry smile on her face, and the "W" in "WTH" also says "We Can't Tell Vietnam Airlines, Jetstar and AirAsia have been ordered to pay a $2.4 billion penalty to US authorities over illegal routes, the Department of Justice said on Tuesday. The civil money penalties are part of a settlement with the airlines over routes to China that carriers used to increase their exposure in the US market, the US Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York said. Under the settlement, Vietnam Airlines must pay $1.45 billion, Jetstar $962.5 million and AirAsia $69.5 million. The airlines had in turn agreed to pay $430 million in civil penalties to the US airlines association, the Department of Justice said. The law firms Reed Smith, Venable and Paul Hastings act as agents for the major carriers on behalf of the airlines association. The carriers will not pay the penalties immediately, but instead will meet their obligations over the next three years through annual license fees, the Department of Justice said. The airlines will also be subject to more than $500 million in counter-trade relief, meaning they could buy goods in the United States in future years and avoid paying tariff tariffs on the goods that they could get for free on other routes. The three international carriers had previously been accused of providing non-compliant routings to Chinese carriers that flew to the US using a loophole in US trade laws. Using these loopholes, the airlines received upwards of 50 per cent of China-US travel with no duties applied, according to the US Attorney's Office for the Southern District of New York. "The United States and its airlines have a cooperative duty to ensure that these treaties are respected and enforced," said Assistant Attorney General Jeffrey Bossert Clark in a statement. "These latest enforcement actions demonstrate that the United States and Vietnam will not tolerate these illicit practices, and that American businesses can be confident that they will be fairly treated." The suit was filed in 2017 under the 1996 US-China Economic and Security Review Commission Trade Agreement (CESR), which was signed by the US and China in August 1996, to make it difficult for American businesses to enter the Chinese market. The US team was led by then Assistant Attorney General John Demers, who is now the Director of National Security. "Today's actions continue to build on the Department's decade-long effort to ensure that American companies are treated fairly in China," US Trade Representative Robert Lighthizer said in a statement.
