The aim of this study was to investigate the potential use of urinary nitrite concentration and Tamm-Horsfall protein (THP) excretion as markers for differentiating ureteropelvic junction (UPJ) and other types of pyelonephritic infection in children. Sixty-seven children (38 females, 29 males), aged between 2 months and 11 years (mean 4.5 +/- 3.4 years), with pyelonephritic infection were included in the study. Urine samples were obtained from the affected side after correction of the obstruction and the UTI was confirmed by radionuclide renography. They were correlated with the clinical and radiological presentations as well as with laboratory data. Urine samples for nitrite and THP measurements were obtained after correction of the obstruction in the d0c515b9f4
