Nearly thirty years since the release of FSX, and all the while flying simulators have become more and more complex. Back then a simple flight sim was all you needed, and anything above it was optional extras. Now high-end performance aircraft and terrain tools have become a major part of the market and they all feed on each other. As a developer I've done my best to bring FSX to life with a modern user experience and today FSX is a highly realistic flying simulator that is available across PC, Mac and Linux operating systems. (Xbox 360 Pro flight, Windows 7, Windows 10). Now, it's time for the next stage in FSX's evolution. FTX Trees HD is the culmination of 7 years of research, development and tweaking. It's a complete overhaul of the previous auto-generated tree textures created back in 2008. We have replaced these with new trees that are double the previous resolution, and have been crafted from high-quality photos of real trees. They are hand-edited and colour-matched to create a top-quality experience, even if you're flying over areas with few trees. Low-level flying takes on a new sense of realism that truly must be seen to be believed, with skimming over treetops, over forests and along rivers having never felt so real! You may not have noticed, but approaches, departures and taxiing have been greatly enhanced by more realistic vegetation. Whether you are new to flight simulation and upgrading FSX for the first time or are a seasoned veteran, FTX Trees HD is designed for maximum compatibility and will upgrade all of your auto-generated trees worldwide. Before installing FSX: Steam Edition, uninstall any other flight sim or navigation titles which use the default texture pack. Re-patch using the following path:

Find out more about Viz and Wikipedia editions of the game and other versions here ----- For my Ludum Dare entry, I created a game based on the Japanese cartoon called Egagami's Diary. The main character Ezogami is a humanoid amoeba that was redesigned to be cute. This game is a visual novel where Ezogami will have to react to events and find out what happens next. This is my first Ludum Dare entry. I had a lot of fun making this game and I think it turned out pretty well. What's new in Egregor Indoctrination:

: The Establishment's Last Standby to Preachers of the Gospel All followers of God can only cease to resist the wickedness and corruption around them, when they cease to obey God's word. No matter how great, how beautiful, how incorruptible the doctrines are - unless God's people of the past were also like-minded - until they could only stand any longer beside the Cross, and say "even though he was righteous, but had no peace, We are all like that" (Luk 18:19) - then these doctrines cannot make anyone change their minds; it will be impossible to convert nonbelievers, and at that point, the dear Lord (through His grace) will send the true believers of his will to this world and establish His Kingdom, for His Kingdom not our kingdoms. My cousins and I grew up in an Evangelical, part-Christian household, and as Catholic indoctrination begins at birth, it was common for us to hear at home and in church propaganda about Jehovah, Jesus, and God the Father, and we were made to believe that they were only good people that were sent to us for our own good, and lead us to heaven. And even as I began to suffer from mental problems as a young man, our parents believed in my condition as a battle between two worlds, the "Bad World" of evil and the "Good World" of good and right ways. Even in those days we saw God as a nice and strong man that protected the world from anything bad like Eve, and the Devil, who was in fact very good looking, but to us it just wasn't enough to explain my problems. It wasn't until after going to Europe that I realized that Christianity, which I had been a believer in, was actually based on demonization of the Jews. In school I had learned that an evil God and the Devil ruled the world, and they were in conflict with each other, though he never really explained what kind of conflict. I had learned that God was white and good, the Devil was black and bad, but I didn't really understand it, nor would I stay awake long enough to understand what it meant. The mere fact that we somehow understood that there had to be two separate worlds, something we would never understand in our own world, never really made it a reality to me. Even today, about ten years later, I can still believe that we are on God's world, and we will go to heaven because God sent his
