After a short time of rest, and some waiting for our morale to return, the group heads to the dungeon. The boss is a level 30 Arch Lich that has an affinity for fire. While the boss isn't particularly hard, it does have a tendency to have many hit point bars, so players are expected to focus on their leveling. The boss can transform into a fireball when it tries to attack, so players should watch out for this. Many players have found that the best way to fight this boss is to use healing spells and focus on countering the attacking aspect of the boss, and don't use damage spells until the moment is right. The boss drops loot consisting of bonuses and mostly quest items, and the loot can be sold for money. Some players might have some issues with their inventory being cleared for only a few seconds, or unable to access the bag menu for a few minutes at a time. If this is the case, there are ways to force an automatic inventory refresh. 1. General Go to the control menu, and scroll down to "AUTO-INVENTORY." Note that this can occur even when you're casting spells, and can be done at any time. 2. Run around, and turn your camera to face the correct direction. Type " Auto-Inventory" into the chat window, followed by a space. Auto-inventory will refresh your inventory automatically. 3. Type "Force Auto-Inventory." This will cause an immediate inventory refresh, and your inventory will remain unlocked the entire time. 4. Sometimes you may have some errors relating to colorblindness. If this is the case, you can manually change the colors of your items or maps. Please note that these steps may vary depending on the platform you are using, so we can't guarantee that you will have no issues. As the adventurers reach the entrance of the first dungeon, they are greeted by an NPC that introduces herself as a team leader that will aid them in navigating the dungeon. In addition to navigating, the team leader will also inform them about the dungeon and its monsters, and the NPC will also teach them the necessary skill to explore the dungeon. Adventurers must lower their standing to "F" if they attempt to directly attack monsters in order to avoid getting into a fight with them. This is not a permanent condition, but the standing will only be lowered after an adequate amount of time passes. Adventurers should note that they cannot open the 9/0,8/1,0,1,64,232,63.png The glamour of political power is a dirty game where intrigue and corruption are both omnipresent and unstoppable. Will you be able to avoid the not so noble schemes of your opponents, and rise to the top of the political food chain? Key Features: - Demolition skill! Each of your actions will have an effect in an ever increasing snowball effect, and there are multiple ways to cause this! - Renown points! The more you meet the requirements of a trial, the higher your Reputation will be, and as it grows, the more ranking points you will receive - Level up! That unit that has recently been employed at your company will be promoted to the next level as their management skills grow, but they will also rise in Reputation - License: new game +! All of your units, ranging from the general staff to the most versatile specialists, have multiple improvement options. Taking a gamble on what will serve your company best will pay off! Skill: Demolition Strengths: - A+ knowledge of the Chinese language. - Strong analytical abilities. - Ability to control multiple departments. Weakness: - A general lack of training in tactics. - Difficult to choose between available options, requiring a critical eye. Operations Department: (Facility 1) - Dodge and Takedown - Important: take advantage of the nation's factory's internal transport capacity by engaging as much as you can in battle with facilities! After you achieve this, 1st level units won't appear in mail calls and requests to expand your transport capacity come with an expensive price tag. - Dodge and Takedown Important: Dodge your way through this battle. Main Power: - Dodge (Counter) The basic combat action skill of the Operations Department, this skill is no good by itself. However, this skill is useful for dodging incoming attacks by the other departments. - 1st level- Dodge (Counter) - 2nd level- Dodge - 3rd level- Dodge Class: General: (1) 10/0,8/1,1,4,73,177,69.png

What's new in Elden Ring:

Gamepax just posted their timezone chart for 2011 and the US is even worse off than in 2010. If the "skips" are Japan, India and Europe (yes, Europe) and the US is +8, then the EU is +10, so it's basically my long-held notion that the US is more advantageous than Europe. So why does no one ever, ever, mention that the US is +11? Again, the cold hard reality is that all these site managers are young men who cannot wipe their own ass. Any summary of well-spoken, literate, knowledgeable, first-year English major in good health 30-something straight out of college right now that wants to declare timezones as round trip from GMT should be able to crank out an answer within a few minutes that would survive being posted on Kotaku, because it's not going to be factually incorrect. The real reason why most sites don't mention this is that the US is only a +8 time zone. Most audiences on US forums know that and are more interested in the uber-nerdy stuff, so they don't usually notice that. For the record, that brings me up to date with the timezones in the world (quite a few months behind for some). "Our fans are pretty good. They don't give away too much.
