Before we get into all of the tech under the hood, here's a quick video of the in-game demos: The next World Cup in Russia will be the tournament where FIFA's developer, SINGAPORE 2015, will debut their "HyperMotion Technology". In the video above, EA SPORTS creative director Matt Bilbey discusses the technology behind FIFA 22's gameplay, including the use of "HyperMotion Technology". "In FIFA, one of the things that we pride ourselves on is player motion capture," says EA SPORTS creative director Matt Bilbey. "When we first launched FIFA back in 1998, we actually put in the motion capture technology that we used in FIFA 17, but as the technology evolved, it became easier to track that player and the data was a lot more precise, so we developed a new engine and that's what we've used in FIFA 17, but it's now at a level that you can actually accurately use in the gameplay." "HyperMotion is something that was developed for FIFA in the last two years," says Bilbey. "For us, it's all about player motion capture and in the last few months, we've been working on the close-up camera to be able to see our players in player motion capture suits more accurately. It was one of the features that we wanted to re-introduce in FIFA because the technology had evolved so much, but unfortunately, the technology was not accurate enough to accurately capture the players in their individual unique motion and what we developed was a way to correct that and make it accurate." "Every time a player touches the ball, we capture that and then we track, update and then utilize what we call 'hypermotion technology' to make sure that each player has their own individual animation," Bilbey says. "If you're comparing players to another player, you get a closer match in terms of hypermotion. If you're comparing to a demonstration video of a player of another player - it doesn't happen." Here's a breakdown of how FIFA 22's technology works: Motion Capture "FIFA is very data hungry. You have over 20 cameras spread throughout the stadium. We have over

FIFA 22 introduces a re-envisioned Playing Surface, some revolutionary AI behaviours and an exciting new way to play FIFA Ultimate Team, with improved gameplay, a new tutorial, and more. We introduce a new representation of the ball's surface called ParetoSurface, which determines how the ball is affected by the surface, player height and speed, intensity and location of the drive, and numerous other factors to create a brand new ball. FIFA 22 allows you to choose the surface your favorite players, clubs and managers play on, including the brand new ParetoSurface. The teams at FIFA World Cup™: Russia 2018™ will compete for the title on this new surface, which includes all the elements that make the game play great, including accuracy and unpredictability. One of the most highly anticipated features of FIFA 22 is the revolutionary revolutionary Tactical Defending. This feature is designed to challenge the way players defend in the modern game. Defending in FIFA is all about timing, and this new feature rewards players for playing smart, reacting to the movements of the opposition and anticipating their actions to take optimal advantage of your unique talents. We also introduced reactive, opponent-based AI, giving players the ability to challenge and outwit each other by using their tactics. On top of these fundamental gameplay innovations, FIFA 22 introduces much-needed improvements to teams, leagues, the community, agents, and in-game tournaments, as well as deep player controls. New Player Scenarios Powered by Football™, EA SPORTS™ FIFA 22 provides an enriched experiences for your favourite clubs by adding numerous player scenarios to improve play and keep the action fresh. A New Playing Surface FIFA 22 introduces a brand new ParetoSurface, allowing you to choose between two distinct surfaces to play on: the brand new ParetoSurface at FIFA World Cup™: Russia 2018™ or the classic FIFA ParetoSurface. Both surfaces reflect the unique aspects of their leagues and the cultures they represent - the ParetoSurface at FIFA World Cup™: Russia 2018™ on the pitch and off the pitch is set apart by the famous country's new stadium and culture. ParetoSurface at FIFA World Cup™: Russia 2018™. The ParetoSurface at FIFA World Cup™: Russia 2018™ is designed to mimic the demands of the 2018 FIFA World Cup™. It provides improved play both on and off the pitch, and will allow for a more
