.Q: How to store set of data in Zend Framework 2? I have a request where I get some data and save them to database. It is not a problem to store data at all, but I need to store several instances of the same data in different columns in the database at once (although in one request). My idea is to put it into the session, but I'm not sure that it is the best idea. A: Use a Zend_Service_Manager instance and inject the data directly into the manager. class My_Service_Manager extends Zend_Service_Manager { protected $_data = array(); public function setData(array $data) { $this->_data = $data; } // retrieve data public function getData() { return $this->_data; } } And register your service like this: $m = new My_Service_Manager(); $m->setData(array('key1' => 'value1', 'key2' => 'value2')); //... $manager->register('myservice.id', $m); You can also merge data from two or more managers. It's up to you. I'm not sure what's the precise point of asking about what's the "best idea". If you have a problem in setting this up, you
