Modern research has shown that changes in parenteral nutrition (PN) therapy can drastically improve survival in an already severely injured host. The authors' protocol for PN support, designed to provide all of the necessary, basic nutrients, has proved to be safe, effective, and decreases complications while providing optimal alimentation, essential in the healing of these patients. The authors' protocol is as follows: PN on Day 1 receives 6 mL/kg/d of 5% dextrose in water. On Day 2 it receives 6 mL/kg/d of 5% dextrose in 0.2% NaCl. From Day 3 to Day 7 it receives 6 mL/kg/d of 5% dextrose in 0.45% NaCl. If the patient has been vomiting the day before PN, a hyperalimentation formula is used. If the patient has not received previous PN, he or she is started on 6 mL/kg/d of 5% dextrose in 0.45% NaCl. Based on the metabolic status of the patient, he or
