If you have an Xperia or any other device that uses the 4.2 update, the following features might be useful for you. With the 4.2 update for Android comes the option to directly update the system firmware from your PC! The firmware update is done remotely from your PC, so no need to do all the steps of the update with an USB cable or take out your phone to do the update from an operator. This way you can remotely update your phone without wasting time, without risking to brick your phone and without accidentally flashing a wrong update. How to update your firmware remotely: The easiest way to do this is if your phone supports updating via Wi-Fi and has updates installed. Then you will need an updater app. So on your phone you connect your phone to Wi-Fi and open the adb settings app: Open the menu and scroll down to "Phone Modem Settings" and click on the "Advanced" tab Now you will see the URL of your device and a number that you have to enter in your phone settings. It is this number that you need to enter when you download the update package! To download the package of the update and manually install, you need a PC and a Wi-Fi connection to the Android phone. On your PC, you open the adb shell of the phone: adb shell Now you can start the installer of the package. You need the ID of your phone in the way that you can open up the "Phone Modem Settings" adb shell cd /data/update.zip Before adb can
