Detoxified oil was used as an effective source of fatty acids in food emulsions with food and chemical additives. The aim of this study was to examine the effectiveness of the esterification method and oils containing lipophilic antioxidants in food emulsions with food and chemical additives. Extracted oils (canola oil (CC) and rapeseed oil (RC)) were esterified by acidification with lactic, citric, and formic acids. The emulsion was prepared by mixing 75% emulsifier and 25% of the extracted oil. Emulsion samples were then prepared by mixing canola oil with 5% formic acid (CF) or 6% lactic acid (CL) or rapeseed oil with 5% lactic acid (RL) and analyzed for fatty acids content. Lactic acid esters resulted in the highest content of fatty acids as compared with the other extracted oils. The stability of these emulsions was determined by pH measurement, rheological, and textural properties of the emulsions. The pH and rheological properties were affected by the extraction method. The least acidic emulsion (in CC and RC) with acidic acid was a base emulsion. Conversely, the acidic emulsion (CF) and non-acidic emulsion (CL) were acidic emulsions. Acidic acid showed better stability for each oil. The textural properties of the emulsions were significantly affected by the stability of the emulsion. Both storage time and temperature significantly affected the properties of the emulsion. Thus, the extraction method affected the quality of the emulsions, and the acidification method affected the fatty acids and acidity of the emulsions. Acidic and non-acidic emulsions were generated by both extraction methods with different properties

Photo: FOX The first time I met Simon Cowell, he was in a casual business attire, sans tie, and he had that gorgeous ruddy complexion you only see on U.K. soccer hooligans. I don't know if I went into a trance or what, but I spoke with him at length. He asked me about my acting career, and I was almost too stunned to respond. I said something non-sensical (What did you just say?) and he laughed, saying, "I think this is the greatest start I've ever had in my life." This anecdote may or may not be true, but I do know
