What's new:

Nascence () is an interactive artwork and educational environment that was created and installed at the Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía, the National Museum of Contemporary Art in Madrid, Spain, in 2014. Nascence was acquired by the European Space Administration (ESA) in 2014 and is now part of the European Armamentarium project that consists of 18 full-size 3D projection systems. Inspired by the frescoes of the 12th century (or possibly 13th-century) Castle of Alhambra, located in the city of Granada, Spain, Nascence is the culmination of over a decade of work with the Museum and Art Laboratory (MAMA Lab), with which it shares many artefacts and items. This relationship continues today, with all project research and development taking place within MAMA Lab. Background Nascence ("to give birth" in French) is the fourth and latest in the series of public artworks installed at the Museo Nacional Centro de Arte Reina Sofía, the National Museum of Contemporary Art of Madrid in Spain, by Cartografica. The tour de force project has been jointly developed and implemented over a number of years by a team of architects and artists. Nascence is the most technologically advanced, including the largest 3D projections, 24-panel screens, presentation, and curved screens ever created for a museum, creating a 360° of environmental spaces. The results of a decade of research by the agency of the Spanish Ministry of Science and Innovation, DGTASI, were represented in research and conferences among architects, scientists, and technicians as well as in publications and educational meetings. The project is named after a traditional gate at the Royal Palace of the Alhambra, located in Granada, Spain. Cartografica (in Spanish Cartografica Interactive Associates) is an independent architecture firm based in Madrid, led by Flora Cintra and Teresa Luque, who have worked on a number of museum projects including Labyrinth (2006) (currently re-installed), Tactile Sculptures (2007-2008), Espejismológico, (2010-2012), and designs by the New York-based firm, Sergison Bates. The works concept, in collaboration with the Spanish Ministry of Science and Innovation, DGTASI, the Centro Nacional de Arte Reina Sofía, F
