For the purposes of this assignment we will be looking at the subject of geopolitics and learning about its particular uses in both national and global politics. You can't accuse me of "controversial conclusions"! Because as history teaches us, they are, after all, a controversial subject. This paper will be the beginning of a discussion to look at history and the influence that it has had on the present as well as the future of this planet. As part of the syllabus, I will be asking each student to write an essay on the subject of geopolitics and its impact on national and global politics. I will be asking students to refer to the first question, which states the following: "Geopolitics is the study of the relations and interactions of geographic issues and regions including the study of geographic and political boundaries, and the boundaries that exist between nations and their relationships with each other". For the purposes of this essay, I want students to look at the impact that wars have had on state affairs over the centuries. What is more, have these wars affected the socioeconomic and political systems of the respective states? This essay will discuss the impact that war has had on the development of the countries where these wars took place. What has caused some countries to develop sooner than others? Can these wars and wars in general, help us to understand "The War on Terror"? The instructor wants students to analyse some of the following concepts that relate to this subject: freedom, colonialism, imperialism, hegemony, national interests, international relations, power, politics, security, terrorism, trade, and war. 'The War on Terror' has impacted the social and political outlook of many people on many continents. It is clear that every country involved in fighting the 'War on Terror' has employed very controversial methods to combat terrorism. The controversial methods used are the infringement of human rights and civil liberties. The instructor wants students to assess the significance of the global threat of terrorism on the current state of international relations. What does it mean when we say that the terrorism has 'reached the height of our fear'? Should we fear an increase of terror attacks in the future? This essay is for students who have studied European History and have studied the politics of the European Union and how its politics shape the state of individual European countries. The instructor wants students to discuss the impact that the European Union has on the political and social agenda of the nations within the Union and how the political situation of one state may affect the social and political life in other countries
