Two patients with secondary rhegmatogenous retinal detachment were found to have acquired monocular blindness during the time between the onset of symptoms and the ophthalmoscopy, whereas the fundus was seemingly normal. The visual field defects were located temporally and in close proximity to the macula. The monocular blindness could be caused by intraocular pressure elevation, disruption of the foveal vessels, or by macular edema due to an intraocular inflammatory process. An acute macular lesion may be missed if the patient is seen too close to the onset of symptoms.1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to dielectric waveguide circuits and more specifically to such circuits having coaxial input/output ports. 2. Description of the Prior Art Dielectric waveguide circuits utilize waveguide paths formed within a dielectric material disposed between inner and outer metal surfaces. Input and output signals are received and transmitted by these waveguide paths. The dielectric waveguide circuits operate as guided wave devices and have distinctive frequency band characteristics as compared to traditional coaxial type cable devices. Dielectric waveguide circuits are well adapted for use in space and under water systems. Because of the particular band characteristics of dielectric waveguide circuits, coaxial feedthrough devices have been developed for providing a coaxial connection between an input port and an output port of the dielect
