The present invention relates to a process for the preparation of certain amino-ester-modified cellulose ethers and to the compositions obtained by such process. WO94/23017 discloses cellulose ethers in which polyamide side chains are introduced with amino-functional groups, particularly amine groups. Also, these amino-functional groups can be directly bound to the cellulose chains. The polyamides can be prepared by polymerising fatty acids in the presence of an amino-group functional initiator. Particularly suitable amino-functional cellulose ethers may be prepared from cellulose and isophorone diamine by a condensation reaction. They are particularly suitable for use as paper sizing agents. WO00/39352 and WO99/39352 relate to anionic film forming agents based on polyamides containing terminal amino groups. Further polyamides having terminal groups, such as polyamides having terminal
