Early outlier detection in multiple longitudinal data with censored outcomes using survival models. Motivated by the need to assess the effects of a treatment on several response indicators at a specific time of study, we consider a more general setup where several failures and successes are recorded at different times. We propose a procedure to detect early outliers in such a setting by making use of the concept of interval survival distributions, introduced and investigated by Porcu (J. Roy. Statist. Soc. Ser. B 66 (2004), no. 1, 37-46). We propose to estimate the survivor function of the corresponding interval survival model by means of a mixture of parametric (e.g. Weibull) survival and regression models. This is accomplished using a fully parametric estimation method, the Efron-Morris algorithm, which ensures a rigorous standard error estimate for the model parameters. We illustrate the performance of the procedure on simulated and real data and show that it is able to detect early dropouts and is able to assess the effect of an intervention on several response indicators simultaneously.

Nott's Castle Nott's Castle is a fortified house and National Monument located in County Roscommon, Ireland. Location Nott's Castle is located on the south-western margin of Lough Derg, north of the village of Nott, County Roscommon. History The castle was probably built in the 15th century and was the home of the Fitzmaurices. It then passed to the MacGillapatrik MacNiallais clan of Mac Giolla Patraic, who were also the hereditary Barons of Ballymacloughlan. They were one of the two main branches of the MacNiallais sept. The other was based in Derrywarragh. When the MacGiolla Patraic died out the castle passed to the Earl of Clanricarde. Nott's Castle was later held by the Nott-Fiaccocoo family and the Kincaids
