The Witch Eye is an independent game by a student at Pune ITI. It is a first-person horror game, with an element of survival horror. You play as a local hunter vicky, and explore the villages of the Valley of Majuli in Uttarakhand. The Valley of Majuli is carved from the high mountains and lies on the border between India and Nepal. The game is loosely based on the legend of "nale ba", a witch who used to live in Bangalore who would use the most familiar names of the people who entered her home. If a man heard that woman's voice, he'd would open the door and die within the next 24 hours. The villagers found out a way to defeat her, and started writing the letters "Nale Ba" on the homes of the people of the town. Nale Ba literally means "Come tomorrow" in Kannada. Nale Ba would leave the village, and the villagers believed that she would return to kill the people if it saw "Nale Ba" written outside the house. Over the years, the story of Nale Ba spread like wildfire, and the villagers tried to stamp it out by writing the words "Nale Ba" on the doors, or uttering it from inside the house. Nale Ba left when she saw the words "Nale Ba" written outside the house. However, this also proved to be counter-productive. The villagers had to continue writing the word "Nale Ba" in order to drive the spirit out. As you explore the towns and villages of the Majuli Valley, you'll find that the villagers don't actually know that the spirit of Nale Ba is no more. They'll ask you to help them in their battle against the spirit. We are releasing the game on the basis of a crowd funding platform called 'Indiegogo', and we need the help of our backers to create more content for the game. So that means, we need to gather more funds to upgrade the game and add more features like a night mode and other third-person views. Storyline: The game has two playable characters. You can switch between them at any time, as long as you have collected enough mementos. You can explore the villages of the Valley of Majuli. If you see Nale Ba's spirit, you have to fight it. If you see Nale Ba's spirit, you have to fight it. If you see Nale Ba's spirit, you have to fight

After years of development and testing, Capt. Edward Strait has finally dreamt up a working working ground vehicle, with a very handy feature: It can actually fly. It's no secret that there's no place in the world more dangerous than the deep blue sea, so once his first prototype plane is in flying order, the newly signed deal with EWL airlines will be the death of the traditional ferry service, making the Captain's plane the most important link in this new breed of flying ground transport. Unfortunately the plane's crash landing has put the plane out of commission, and now it's up to you to retrieve a vital component the plane needs in order to be back in flying order again. Can you find the component, and make it to safety? "They were probably only a few metres away. "We had a real struggle just to find the back door." It was the most exciting two-minute rally of the opening round, with jockey van Marle nipping at Jim Walmsley's heels. But Van Marle, who has a super handicap under saddle, eventually finished second. Van Marle, who is en route to the Imperial Palace handicap at Ascot, said he was "humbled and honoured" to have finished second in the Morphetts Vale Stakes. "He's a good horse and he was just that little bit better than me," he said. "But he's nowhere near in the quality of the horse that won. "He's not a multiple winner. It's a good day for him and we'll have a think about the second." Van Marle said he was surprised no-one had called him after the race. "I still can't believe that no-one's bothered to call me, that's the real mystery," he said. "I think I'd have a great smile if someone did call." Van Marle's next start is the Thoroughbred Club of South Australia's Finkel Stakes at Morphettville next Sunday. Saddles are a part of a horse's performance arsenal, and some of the world's leading jockeys make their living in the saddle. Here we take a look at the top ten saddle-wearing superstars of the modern era.

: A Fireman's Romance - A TV Production Diary - Part 13 Sunday, June 21st, 2008 A year has passed, since we set out to take pictures of a year's worth of missions for TV Tokyo. Since 2004, we have been documenting our adventures with TV Tokyo's news division. Our series of TV Journal was released in 2006 and is now considered a classic of the type, with over 20 million viewers. We've also made a number of VHS-videos documenting our trips. Together with the famous Orange Juice, we've made our own little TV unit. Now we're ready to take a look back. In the following, we're talking about Expedition Zero: A Fireman's Romance, a 58-minute Japanese mini-drama shot in 2005 and aired on TV Tokyo as a one-hour drama in 2006. A sequel, that we are also currently working on, will be shown on TV Tokyo during the course of the autumn. As this is a TV production diary we'll soon take a short trip through the production process of Expedition Zero. Jens Porath has been working as an assistant camera op and camera operator for the last two years. Since 2006 he assists the head of the TV production unit Ben Blümmerbach... damage at Fukushima earthquake, 1984Following the catastrophe at the Fukushima nuclear power plant, since May 11th, 2011, most of the aircraft take offs and landings in Japan have been banned over Honshu and the northern-parts of Kyushu. The result is that there is no more public in those areas. With the Japanese radioactive contamination still being monitored and the effects still being studied, what would normally be considered public areas are now considered “no entry zones” for the time being. Emergency workers continue to establish their patrols and radioactive contamination levels are still rising. The Japanese government is still monitoring the effects of the earthquake and Tsunami that occurred on 11th March, 2011. The effects of the catastrophe at the Fukushima nuclear power plant have not been completely resolved for now. According to the Japanese government (and some newspapers) at the moment a large amount of highly radioactive water had seeped into the ground, causing serious groundwater contamination around the reactor building. We’ve seen this before, many times of course,
