You'll need to have ICQ available (a registered account is required). You'll also need an untrusted person who is using Octochat (face-to-face or on the phone), together with the 'traffic shaping' feature on. Once you setup Octochat, the traffic shaping feature will be available from then on. You can not have the traffic shaping option and still use the chat features of Octochat (file transfers or instant messages). Your computer or phone must have a secure internet connection. Octochat can use secured file transfers by using the OctoConnect application which is available at the download site (shown below) or you can manually enter the addresses. You will need the TwoFish (2fish.org) which can be downloaded from the link below. Octochat is a file transfer and chat program. It is fairly simple to setup and use and includes a chat window where you can instant message from any ICQ registered user on the internet with a link to Octochat and many other users. Just start up the program and sign in with a password. A profile will be created and any information you have entered (name, email, age) are stored securely in the profile. There is also an option to have the chat window automatically open up whenever you start Octochat. You can then start chatting instantly with any ICQ registered user. Octochat includes a unique 'traffic shaping' feature where it will help to hide the time you sent a message or file, how big it was - or the fact that you sent it at all. Octochat will automatically start on any system with Windows XP installed (Windows 98 through Windows 8). 2 File Transfer Methods: You can use file transfers as you normally would - by copying files from one folder on your computer to another on the other persons computer. You can use the ICQ network to transfer files (no internet connection required) - you simply enter the other person's username, the file name and the location of the file you want to send. The option to enter the file transfer information manually or automatically is a configurable option. One advantage to doing it manually is that you can add some secret phrases to help guard against random file or email transfers. For instance, you could enter "There is a parking lot on the left!" Another example is a word that is unique to you; for instance, "I had to say b7e8fdf5c8

TwoFish, when used as the only encryption mechanism, is not sufficient to guarantee secure communication and file exchange, but together with the traffic shaping feature, it can provide good protection. This program uses the TwoFish encryption algorithm. TwoFish is a free encryption implementation which works for both secure chat and file transfer. It has been improved since the last release of Octopus and is now using a crypto engine named Pedestal instead of the older Serpent. The Pedestal implementation of the TwoFish uses Block ciphers and one-time-pad encryption, to make it a solid and robust tool.
