Read Full Article Theoretical investigation of the structure and the electronic properties of  $\text{Ag}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  and  $\text{Au}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  in water solution at the HF and MP2 level. The potential energy surface of  $\text{Ag}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  and  $\text{Au}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  were explored with the CCSD(T) theory.

An improved basis set, aug-cc-pVQZ, was employed. The geometries of all the possible structures of  $\text{Ag}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  and  $\text{Au}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  at the level of HF and MP2 were investigated with the B3LYP/aug-cc-pVTZ method. The geometry of two local energy minima were established. The harmonic vibrational frequency of  $\text{Ag}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  and  $\text{Au}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  was also calculated. The infrared and Raman spectra of these complexes were predicted. The assignments of all the observed vibrational peaks were discussed in detail. In addition, the electronic structure of  $\text{Ag}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  and  $\text{Au}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  were studied. The results indicated that both the main local energy minima and their vibrational frequencies of  $\text{Ag}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  and  $\text{Au}_2\text{O}_2(4-)$  are similar to the corresponding species of  $\text{Ag}_2\text{O}_2(2-)$  and  $\text{Au}_2\text{O}_2(2-)$  in the gas phase.

Allergic pollen-induced asthma during pregnancy. An increase in the prevalence of asthma during pregnancy in Western countries has been described previously. This increased prevalence of asthma during pregnancy could be related to the asthma worsening with pregnancy. The influence of pregnancy on the pollen-induced asthma has not been well described. This study was undertaken to assess the impact of pregnancy on asthma induced by outdoor allergens, especially in the change of lung function, and to evaluate the change of the peripheral blood eosinophil levels in these patients. We studied 29 asthmatic pregnant patients (19 in early pregnancy, 10 at the end of pregnancy) and 30 nonpregnant asthmatics (10 in the first trimester and 20 in the nonpregnant state) with a history of allergic rhinitis and/or bronchial asthma. All patients had positive skin tests to airborne allergens. Their lung function (forced expiratory volume in 1 second) and peripheral blood eosinophil counts were assessed during the pollen seasons (February) and nonpollen seasons (November). There was a significant decline in the FEV1 during pregnancy compared to the nonpregnant state (p < 0.05). There are many assets and liabilities to consider for the Michigan Outdoor Project, but I would like to focus on just one here. In my previous post, I discussed the potential state of play prior to the 2011 Michigan Primary and the higher-than-expected turn out in that election. I also asserted that, post-reform, many problems and challenges remain. The failure rate on some of these problems is well over 70%. To put it another way: the state of work for Michigan's state agencies 0cc13bf012
