. Distinguishing and searching for its next victim. Postoperative Immediate Breast Reconstruction: The Role of Mastectomy Skin Flaps in the "Delayed" Transsternal Approach. Skin-sparing mastectomy (SSM) has become increasingly popular for breast cancer surgery. The primary goal of this study was to evaluate the immediate breast reconstruction (IBR) results when using both the subpectoral and modified Baker methods in patients who had undergone SSM with the reduction of resected gland mass. A secondary aim was to evaluate factors that may have influenced postmastectomy skin flap survival. The authors compared the breast reconstruction outcomes in two groups of patients who underwent SSM. The study cohort had undergone SSM with reduction of resected gland mass using the conventional deep inferior epigastric perforator (DIEP) flap (group 1) or an extended DIEP flap (group 2). After the skin incision, the surgeons immediately transferred the skin flap to the inframammary fold after dissection of the pectoralis major muscle. The aesthetic outcomes were evaluated by a plastic surgeon who independently reviewed photographs and clinical pictures. Fifty-one patients were enrolled in the study. Group 1 had 41 breasts and group 2 had 36 breasts. The mean follow-up period was  $519.14 \pm 253.12$  days. The patient satisfaction rates were statistically similar between groups. However, the preoperative plan and postoperative breast volume were significantly higher in group 2. The postoperative mastectomy scar in group 2 was significantly longer, especially in the vertical direction ( $P = .009$ ). In addition, flaps were significantly longer in group 2 ( $P$  [Psychiatric emergencies in the primary care setting]). The criteria for psychiatric care were defined in the first part of this article (psychiatric emergencies). The work of a family doctor depends on the initial assessment, the diagnostic assessment, the treatment, and follow-up. The majority of the population suffering from psychiatric complaints is not recognized by the family doctor as needing treatment and so seeks help elsewhere. There is
