Zumba Fitness Core (SU6XGT): NTSC [1947] [Trials to prevent malarial infection in Angola]. In 1972-1979 several studies were conducted in Angola in order to develop strategies for

controlling malaria transmission. The main activities were carried out in the malaria-endemic province of Huambo and in the area of the Luanda suburb Namacurra. The operations were aimed at control of the vector with DDT-Tlambda spraying and mass chemoprophylaxis of the local population with chloroquine and mass chemotherapy of the cattle with DDT. Post-implementation evaluation was carried out in 1,357 households from ten villages (four sprayed, six not sprayed and two controls) and among a sample of 330 children (10-15 years old) living in these villages for 14 days. The studies demonstrated that the vector density was not significantly different in sprayed and non-sprayed areas. However, no significant change in human malaria incidence was observed and the prevalence of the malarial antibodies in the population of the villages was not different. The second phase of the project (1979-1982) involved control of the vector with DDT-Tlambda and treatment of cattle with DDT only in the coastal province of Luanda, to ascertain whether it was possible to carry out selective control. Because of high levels of insecticide resistance, the efficacy of the DDT dips was only slight (32.2%) and parasitological control was unsatisfactory. On the other hand, it was seen that in the non-sprayed province (Luanda) the insecticide resistance was less and it was possible to improve malarial control. It was concluded that the vector control program could be expanded to the entire country. The program should use DDT for vector control and in addition mass chemotherapy with chloroquine to eliminate the disease in the population. Anorexia nervosa: a neuropsychological profile of treatment response. The neuropsychological profile of anorexia nervosa (AN) has revealed a consistent constellation of core problems. These include an impairment of memory and a range of attentional and perceptual deficits. Most such studies have reported on people who have been extensively treated for an average of two years, but recent studies have reported less impairment among

---

people who remain untreatable than had been previously thought. This study examined the relationship
