Field of the Invention This invention relates to a printing apparatus which prints a printing image to a print medium such as paper, cloth or other medium as desired. 2. Description of the Related Art There are various printing apparatuses. In these, a printing device prints printing image data stored in a printing image data storage device such as a magnetic disk or the like on a print medium. The printing device sometimes fails to receive or store printing image data from a host computer. The printing device receives printing image data from the host computer only when a predetermined time has elapsed after the last printing image was completed. Even if a printing image is completed during the predetermined time, the printing device fails to store the printing image data until the predetermined time has elapsed. If the printing image is completed before the predetermined time elapses, the printing device stores the printing image data in the printing image data storage device, but if it fails to store the printing image data in the storage device, the printing image data is not stored in the storage device. When the printing image data has been completed in the printing apparatus as described above, the printing apparatus is instructed by the host computer to execute an operation such as a reprinting operation to print the printing image data from the time point when the printing image data was stored in the printing apparatus until the time point of the completion of the printing image. However, the printing apparatus stores the printing image data in the storage device after the completion of printing. When the printing image data is stored in the storage device, the host computer is informed of the completion of printing. The host computer then instructs the printing apparatus to execute an operation such as a reprinting operation of the printing image data from the completion of printing. In a printing apparatus as described above, if the printing image data is completed before the completion of printing, the printing image data is not stored in the storage device. Therefore, the host computer is informed of the completion of printing while the printing image data is stored in the storage device. The printing image data is also printed and the reprinting of printing is not executed. On the other hand, if the printing image data is not completed until the time point of the completion of printing, the printing image data is stored in the storage device, but

We report a case of prenatal diagnosis of cerebral ventriculomegaly with short stature. A primipara at 31 weeks of gestation was referred to our hospital. This study included a family history of prenatal diagnosis of ventriculomegaly. The ultrasonographic findings were as follows: ventricular dilatation, shortening of the long bones, and craniomegaly. Fetal echocardiography showed no signs of pulmonary hypertension. Cerebral ventriculomegaly was diagnosed prenatally at 31 weeks of gestation. His height was measured at -2.1 SD. He also had hypogonadism and showed frequent vomiting before birth. A boy with 46, XY karyotype was born and his height was measured at -2.2 SD. Surgical closure of the ventricular septal defect was performed in a neonatal period. Magnetic resonance imaging at 8 months of age revealed that brain atrophy was severe. The boy's intelligence is in the normal 6d1f23a050
